Captain Joseph Lenow, who has de-voted much of his life to the contempla-coarse, and an honest frankness in his Testerday afternoon an affrighted horse dashed at a fearful speed down Main street, between Adams and Poplar. Seeing the dauger incident to pedestrians, Officer Cogbill seized the horse by the reins and, although dragged some distance, succeeded in stopping the animal. Officer Cogbill, who is notoniya gentleman, but an efficient officer, deserves credit for the gallant act. Fortunately he was not injured.

There is no effort of the press more effective in promoting excellence in our selves than when directed to the reproduction and laudation of excellence in others. If we would have those now living become worthy of the dead, we have a simple legend tells to coarse, and an honest frankness in his conversation that won everybody. He died in 1858, and

We understand that negro burglars infest the surrounding country, and much property is being stolen by them. It is no uncommon thing for a garden to be stripped of its products, while houses are frequently entered by these thieves and robbed of many valuable articles. With the success that has recently attended musical affairs in Memphis we are led to believe that such a festival is possible here, and that it would have the same effect—namely, the uniting all our musical societies and clubs by the bonds of brotherhood such as should, but does not, link them together. Perring ought to try his hand at such a festival. Directed by him and properly seconded by our citizens, we believe it might be extended through a week at the great exposition building.
